After getting the update to 3.1.1, I can install DS5 without any problems. Q: Is there a way to search for a specific text on a webpage? I'm trying to find out a way to write a python program that will take a username and password and search the internet for a website that has the same login credentials. I think I have to use a crawler but I'm not sure how to use that. A: Use BeautifulSoup to extract the login information from a web page. In [1]: from BeautifulSoup import BeautifulSoup In [2]: from urllib2 import urlopen In [3]: url = "" In [4]: html = urlopen(url) In [5]: soup = BeautifulSoup(html) In [6]: print 'Username: ', soup.find('input', {'name': 'Username'}).string Username: admin In [7]: print 'Password: ', soup.find('input', {'name': 'Password'}).string Password: rw1nry!123!a Now that the streets of Paris are sodden with the sticky rain that has had many of the bike racers withdrawing to their hotels, we can perhaps turn our attention back to this weekend's race. We will be missing the usual commentary of the Tour de France with L'Equipe's Bernard Hinault, George Hincapie and Richard Virenque telling us all about the six days in the saddle, but we have our own guide-writers, in the form of two cyclists who have made the full Tour. We call on the men themselves – Tom Chivers and Mike Hall – to give us their own much-needed insights into what's going on over there. Last week I walked the course at Ampleforth, a great prep, as I set about writing my own summation. It gave
