Anyway, I've been dealing with some real big issues for me lately...and as I've started fighting for myself, some things have started coming to light for me that I had no idea were issues until just recently. I'm starting to feel at a point where I'm ready to grow up

-Storyline: Humor and Romanticism with a cherry pie and…uh…a small thing of Frosting. Cafe Crush is an age old question that can be answered with a simple cake stand or an experience and a bit of "Frosting". But with a bit of the right ingredients, you can definitely make a good cup of coffee. The game is set in a modern coffee shop where two characters meet and have a bit of an "Intellectual Conversation". This conversation goes on during the course of the game and helps you find out exactly what your character's preferences are. The back and forth leads to more romanticism, and even more "Frosting". The story unfolds during the course of the game and, with the points earned, these actions can lead you further in the game. The result of your choices are displayed as a small model in the bottom left corner of the screen. -Interface: Cafe Crush offers a fairly traditional visual novel style interface. To progress you merely select the events or decisions from the chapter menu or let the story unfold naturally. -Controls: There are only two buttons on your control pad: Left for moving the doll and Right for making choices. The commands are made clear on screen and are easy to use. -Languages: You have the option of a english or french version of the game. -Multiplayer: The game allows for up to three players to play simultaneously. -Changelog: Added new graphics and the way the characters are moved. Added a new song. Added story progress information. "Forgetting about the "Age of Sexual Relations"." Reduced loading times on the main menu. Fixed the "I love you" button in the -OCTAL- in the "Chosen Events". -Features: -Mini Games 3 mini games inspired by the story. -Save Game: Save your game and view it later. -Reworked the sound system. -New character animations. -New voices. -Playable online through the www.cafecrush.com website. Possibility to make choices. Interaction with other characters, sometimes takes you to the street. Coffee Shop Cafe. A place to have intellectual conversations. What is your attitude towards Sex? Pages Tuesday, November 14, 2016 Crying In the Night by Apartment 3 Playground Welcome to the first of our monthly reviews, and we are talking about CRIING IN THE NIGHT! Crafted by Urban Twilight and designed by Cartulary. According to Urban Twilight, here is what she had to say on her blog about her creating story for this kit: I created this kit thinking of inspiration in loss, it's a story that I felt like needed to be told! My mission for this Articels was to create a kit that was kitschy in nature, one that would be easy to create, and one which would make you feel like a kid in a candy shop! I think I'm getting there, lol. The binding of this kit is one of the most important parts of the art. You need to get the best it can be for your card base, and bind it properly for the greatest look, I folded it up just a tad too tight at first, and then realized after finishing the other cards I could move it back a little. Here is what you need to make your own kit. To make the kit, you will need four star pattern papers; two bright, one dark and one patterned; a rectangle paper for the base of your card; card stock in the colors needed; scissors and ink pen; stamp set; epoxy glue; paint; and I alternated part with the adhesive products to make my card lay flat, definitely a messy job. The most difficult part of the kit was the main big part of the kit, I used two different hemp twine for the knots, it was hard to get the right amount of knots, but once I got the knots spot-on I was a winner and proud. The most difficult part to make was the smiley face on the middle of the pouch, I remember this card being one of the most frustrating I had to ever do, and I had to use the skin color again, this time I did get the brown/white a
