Have fun ?'Infinitely Gifted': The HIV Story being told on film Filmmaker Tara Orme, whose father Harvey died from Aids in 1993, has made a movie about the epidemic from personal experience. Harvey Orme would have celebrated his 53rd birthday today. Tara Orme's father, Brian, who died from AIDS in 1993, passed the same birthday on a different continent. "He loved films. It was the one common interest we all had in common. He would have loved this," says Tara of her father's reaction to a screening of her award-winning film,'Infinitely Gifted: The Aids Story'. The film, which the 14-year-old wrote, directed and starred in, was shortlisted for the Michael Powell Award at the prestigious BFI London Film Festival, which took place recently. It tells the tale of Harvey and his love of film through the 21 years of his life from his birth in 1959 right through to his death in 1993. His painful struggle with Aids that eventually took his life is shown in gritty, sometimes excruciatingly clinical detail. It takes a surreal turn when during his final months he is in the company of a man who's kissing flowers in a park until a police car turns up. This leads to a verbal scuffle, a dreadful jail-cell shower for his belongings, a court bail and a new partner. But these events cannot compare to the devastating news about the spread of the deadly virus into his bloodstream. The man plays out the events with various characters who

"But I took it upon myself to give it a try and saw how much fun it was to perform. It's been a huge part of my life as a person and in who I am as a basketball player." Like most of his teammates and coaches, Wood doesn't suffer from LeBron fatigue. He speaks to reporters twice a week and occasionally gives a hand to management as a first-year pro. Yet for all the initial hype surrounding him, Wood has largely moved away from the spotlight. In fact, Wood has become a mere blip on the radar for his first season playing for the Lakers. He doesn't talk much about joining the team, or the star-studded cast around him. He enjoys being unnoticed, he says. "I definitely enjoy people not knowing who I am. It kind of keeps it fun." How'd he end up with the Lakers? The notion was initially dispelled as Los Angeles Lakers president of basketball operations Magic Johnson wanted to add a rim protector, and Sean Williams was the best available. But things changed over the summer. Johnson and his assistant, Lawrence Frank, had their eyes on Kentavious Caldwell-Pope as well as Nerlens Noel. But of course, as former Laker Ron Artest once famously said, "you don't expect the Lakers to improve upon greatness." Johnson, Frank and the Lakers' d41b202975

What's new in Donation - Level 4:

(pictured right) The tumour does not appear to damage the blood vessels. Her heart muscle is well-functioning. I believe that the cancer was caused by some of the complications of my treatment for infertility. She called an ambulance and they brought her to the Royal London Hospital, where she stayed for the remainder of the day and the next day. They then discharged her and she continued to be well-managed by the same team of doctors through out her initial weeks of hospital treatment. The doctors decided to keep her closer to hospital in the following weeks when we were unsure what our future would be. We felt that this was the safest option for her on that time. She stayed in hospital for a total of six weeks, with a further two weeks added on to complete her fourth treatment. It was a busy week as we had to stay with her for every day that she spent at the hospital, staying in the hospital room with her. Part of the treatment involved a colonoscopy. This was performed on the Monday after she was in hospital. She was well-followed-up and upon examination we found no signs of any cancer or any abnormalities. She is now showing some good signs of recovery. She has decided to take a break from work for a few weeks and is looking forward to spending quality time with us. She will probably be in hospital for another one or two weeks, depending on her recovery. Prognosis I believe that she will fully recover. Her chances of survival are very good. There is no return of cancer should it return. Aftermath of treatment Following this treatment, we have agreed to discontinue the use of fertility drugs. It's good because my children are now old enough to have children on their own and I would like them to be older that we have children. We want to use these last few years of our lives to enjoy ourselves. After treatment she began to search for some help on where to look for experts to help her better her chances of having a baby. She has kindly helped me with my personal recovery with her loving and honest nature to help me in all my personal life. I believe that her strong work ethic comes with her kindness and a great sense of humour to help me as an ongoing support. She often helps me to remember that I am a lucky man and should try not to take too much for granted such as there always seem to be
