I'm using Java and I want to send the HTML as an attachment. Here is the code: String html = "This is some text in a html file"; Document document = Jsoup.parse(html); //Create a content type header with the MIME type and a BINARY boundary String header = "Content-Type: text/html; charset=utf-8\r " + "Content-Transfer-Encoding: binary\r " + "Content-Disposition: attachment; filename=\"text.html\"\r " + "Content-ID: text.html\r " + "BINARY"; ByteArrayOutputStream out = new ByteArrayOutputStream(); OutputStream outputStream = out; PrintWriter outWrite = new PrintWriter(outStream); Writer writer = new StringWriter(); outWrite.append(header); //Create a content writer ContentWriter writer = new HTMLContentWriter(writer); Document document = Jsoup.parse(header);

Work on managing and editing your photos in a few mouse clicks. All you have to do is to copy your photo from your phone or the web in the.[Managing bone metastasis in prostate cancer: state-of-the-art and perspective]. Bone metastases are mainly due to prostate cancer and are responsible for both skeletal related events (SRE) and quality of life impairment. Their clinical management is often complex and multidisciplinary. The design of such a "personalized" therapeutic strategy must take into account quality of life issues, and include an evaluation of SRE burden, prognostic factors, patient comorbidities and life expectancy. To approach the problem of a systemic treatment for bone metastases, clinicians have to consider not only efficacy but also toxicity, ability to control pain, preservation of quality of life and control of the disease. More than a decade since the development of docetaxel, new agents are emerging and the principles of managing bone metastases are evolving. The approach to managing bone metastases in the context of a potentially curative treatment of prostate cancer is discussed. -- and he needs to step up his game. David Silva is exactly the kind of player you need when you're playing a game against top-flight, experienced opposition. He is totally unflustered under pressure, calm and composed at the moment of least expected joy. His last-ditch chest-high cross was nearly the equal of his excellent curling long throw. And it was, from a line from which he would have scored had it been angled a fraction more gently. Oh, and it was wrong footed, too. A spectacular kick-off from Marouane Fellaini was deciphered with exemplary accuracy and David Silva was the man to do it. Dzeko is so creative. A half-time substitute, he flashed across the left wing, sending in an angled cross. Mata, operating underneath, was ready for this. Was so ready that his centre-back partner, Michael Carrick, was first to the ball. Drove a low, screaming shot through traffic, too low, even for Bailly. Was it a pulled goal? No. Fellaini is caught flat-footed and the ball hits his chest. It was not a pulled goal. A cross that was thrown in, on the ground. It was a cross. The genius of Silvestre's back-heel. These footballers are so quick, so clever,
